

A bright future ahead

Aiming to build a network of young researchers from all over the world who have an interest in the Balkan (SEE) region and Republic of Macedonia, the OHRID Institute for Economic Strategies and International Affairs launched its internship program for the second year, providing an opportunity to visit, reside, work, be part of the Ohrid Institute team and conduct research in Macedonia and the wider region. The interns will conduct research and actively participating in the work of the OHRID Institute while also gaining hands-on experience of the region and skills in think-tank work. After the completion of their internship, interns remain part of OHRID Institute's community and future cooperation on various projects is encouraged.

Applicants are expected to be university students, undergraduates or graduates preferably interested in international and economic studies. They should also have interest in policy research and at least basic research skills. An interest in one or more of OHRID Institute's programs of research would be an advantage. Proficiency in English is essential. There are no citizenship requirements.

This is second year in a row for the OHRID Institute to implement this program, namely up till now the Institute engaged 6 interns, four from Republic of Macedonia and two international ones, from the Pepperdine University in Los Angeles, California, USA and from London School of Economics, UK.
